Flies British Warning to Nazis

ENVOY TAKES BERLIN SHARP WORD ON WAR

Henderson Expected to Tell Hitler Personally How His Country Stands.

SUDETEN RANKS SPLIT

Divide Over Attitude Toward Czech Proposal; German Army Exercises Go on.

BULLETIN

BERLIN —(U.P.)— Sir Nevile Henderson, British ambassador to Germany, is scheduled to see Fuehrer Adolf Hitler Friday, reliable quarters reported today. This news came as Henderson left London by airplane with instructions from his government concerning the Czechoslovak crisis.

(By Associated Press)

LONDON — Britain's ambassador to Germany left by plane for Berlin today armed with what informed persons said was authority to warn Germany anew in vigorous terms that Britain might not be able to remain neutral if war came in central Europe.

The envoy, Sir Nevile Henderson, looked grave as he boarded his plane at 1:15 p. m.

Henderson was expected to arrive in Berlin shortly after 6 p. m. and to see Foreign Minister Joachim Von Rippentrop soon thereafter. Diplomatic quarters there believed he was bringing a personal message for Reichsfuehrer Hitler from Prime Minister Chamberlain.

Expected to See Hitler.

Persons close to the British government said Henderson was authorized to reiterate privately to Hitler if necessary the warning voiced at Lanark Saturday by Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer—in substance, that Britain might not be able to remain aloof if the German-Czechoslovak crisis over the Sudeten Germans lead to open conflict.

Henderson, who attended a meeting of the British cabinet yesterday, was said to be empowered to say to Germany's leaders

Davis Says On Stand He Paid Hines

Mouthpiece for Schultz Describes Visit to Politician's Home.

NEW YORK—(AP)—J. Richard (Dixie) Davis, 32-year-old "kid mouthpiece" of the old Dutch Schultz mob, testified today in the policy racket conspiracy trial of Tammany district leader James J. Hines that he had visited Hines' at his home in company with Schultz.

"In the fall of 1932, did you give Hines money?" asked District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey.

"Yes," Davis said.

He said he went to Hines' home with Leo Rosenthal, a Hines aide.

Gave Hines $2,000.

"I told Hines I heard he needed money, so I gave him $2,000," Davis swore.

"What did he say?"

"Thank you."

The dapper young lawyer, disbarred after his connections with the multi-million dollar Schultz policy racket became known, took the stand after John F. Curry, deposed boss of Tammany Hall, had testified under cross-examination of his long-standing feud with Hines.

Hines is accused of giving political protection to the Schultz gang.

"I did not blame Hines for my deposal from the leadership of Tammany hall," Curry said. "But —I have never spoken to him since then."

'Mouthpiece' Nervous.

Davis, in a smartly-tailored blue suit, but palpably nervous, spoke in a low, thin voice.

Only once did Davis look at Hines. It was a quick, furtive glance, coldly returned by the 61-year-old defendant, and then Davis quickly returned to what has been heralded as his "singing lesson" under the tutorship of District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey.

"Singing lesson," in the jargon of the underworld, is the action of a prosecutor in getting a reluctant witness to "squeal."

Davis balked for weeks after his capture last February, but finally agreed to turn state's evidence.

He said he became a partner with Martin (Moe) Weintraub, a co-defendant, who also served as a lawyer in handling policy raid arrests for the Schultz mob. Weintraub's trial was severed before the Hines trial began.

He got into the policy racket in 1930, Davis said, getting some business from George Weinberg, Schultz' business manager.

"I averaged 10 to 15 policy cases a week. My fees then were $15 to $25 a case," he said.

Gains Confidence.

Davis spoke with furrow brow. As the prosecutor led him on, however, he seemed to gain more assurance.

Davis said he was 26 years old when he first met Dutch Schultz,

Limbach, a captain in the Ohio national guard, was brought to Columbus by an army ambulance airplane yesterday and entered Mount Carmel hospital where one of the two fractures he suffered was to be reset. It slipped during the flight to Columbus.

Expert Marksmen Lead New Shotgun Attack on Starlings

Mansfield's annual shotgun attack starlings which roost nightly in the trees of Central park is already underway—but this year only expert marksmen qualify to exterminate the nuisance birds.

Police Chief M. K. Bates today said that shooting of the birds is being done only by persons having expert knowledge of firearms. The policy in former years to permit shooting by all comers has been done away with.

Bates said that only persons given a permit by his office will be permitted to shoot the birds.

With hundreds of the birds roosting nightly in Central Park trees, city officials admit the nuisance is a baffling problem. Shooting has been criticized by some persons but officials said they knew of no other means of exterminating the birds there.

A recent visitor from New York suggested trapping the birds in place of using firearms. Mayor C. M. Hunter said he didn't think traps would work because the birds do not infest the park in large numbers during the day, apparently feeding elsewhere and returning to the park at night.

Shooting of the birds is being supervised by Park Superintendent Jacob Rahm.

SEES FINISH OF CUT-OFF JOB BY LATE FALL

Highway Engineer Says New Road May Be in Use Jan. 1 If Weather's Favorable.

CONCRETE POURING BEGINS

Two 6-Hour Shifts of 60 Men Each at Work on Ashland Road Paving Project.

Completion of the paving of the Windsor cut-off on route 42 at the Richland-Ashland county line by late fall and possible use of the new road by the end of the year was seen today by Boyd Wierman, resident state highway engineer in Richland county.

With two shifts of 60 men employed on the project, pouring of concrete base for the highway had been started today and it was expected that the paving will be completed by November if the weather is favorable.

60 Days Needed For Paving.

The weather element is the biggest "if" in the prediction, however, Wierman said, because concrete cannot be poured in the rain or freezing temperatures. He estimated that 60 working days would be needed for the actual paving.

In the event of good weather the road should be ready for local traffic as soon as brick is laid, Wierman said, but he added that the highway probably will not be officially opened until next spring.

Wierman explained that specifications call for paving of two of the 3.59 mile strip with brick on a concrete base, while the remaining section, or the Ashland county end, will be paved with concrete slab. Workmen are now laying the concrete base for the brick section at the Richland end. The pavement will be 30 feet wide.

Explains Need of 2 Types.

The two types of road will be used, he said, due to the variance in the earth base for the highway. "The mile and a half at the eastern end is thorough flat, wet ground, while the western part is hilly," the engineer said. "Engineers on the project decided that it would not be advisable to use brick in the low-lying section," he added.

Working shifts of 60 men each are employed from 6 a. m. until noon and from noon until 6 p. m. in an effort to complete the job in the scheduled 200 days. As work progresses, employment probably will be increased to nearly 250 men, Wierman said.

Construction of the $251,000 project is in charge of the W. H. Ringwald company, Chillicothe.

When completed, the cut-off will shorten the distance between Mansfield and Ashland and will eliminate a number of dangerous curves in route 42.

Defeated as Purge Fails

WILLIAM G. McADOO

GOV. OLIN JOHNSTON

Blessed by President Roosevelt in his effort to purge the senate of candidates who have been unsympathetic to the New Deal, both Senator McAdoo and Gov. Johnston were beaten in their state primaries yesterday.

Johnston was defeated in South Carolina as Democrats there renominated Senator Ellison D. (Cotton Ed) Smith. In California, the contest was closer, but McAdoo apparently had been defeated by Sheridan Downey.

G. O. P. Committee To Endorse Candidates Under New By-Laws

The Richland county Republican executive committee will be authorized to endorse candidates for elective and appointive offices under new by-laws adopted last night at a session of the committee.

Endorsement powers, which in the past have been held only by the central committee, will enable the executive body to play an important part in choosing candidates for county offices and in making recommendations for district and state posts.

The clause giving the power of endorsement is the only change in the committee's by-laws. Other functions provided for in the constitution have been performed in the past by the executive group.

Under the new by-laws, the committee, headed by Ralph M. Hardy, is authorized to:

1. Endorse candidates.
2. Collect campaign funds and pay bills.
3. Provide headquarters, employ help and fix salaries of employes.
4. Carry out a publicity program
5. Name delegates to the state convention.
6. Fill vacancies in central and executive committees.
7. Organize Republican clubs among business, industrial, youth and other groups.

The constitution and by-laws were drawn up by a committee in-

M'Adoo Defeated In West; 'Cotton Ed' Wins In East.

PENSIONER LEADS

Roosevelt Philosophic Over Defeat of Favorites.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Defeated apparently on two primary election fronts—in South Carolina and California—President Roosevelt accepted the situation philosophically today, and proceeded with plans for further "purging" of those Democratic dissidents who have hamstrung portions of the New Deal.

Mr. Roosevelt's only comment on the victory won in South Carolina by Senator E. D. (Cotton Ed) Smith, whom he had hoped to eliminate in yesterday's Democratic primary, was this:

"It is often true that it takes a long, long time to bring the past up to the present."

Concerning the apparent defeat of Senator William Gibbs McAdoo in California, for whom Mr. Roosevelt did more political campaigning than for any other candidate in this year's primaries, there was no comment. The result in California was not considered final enough to warrant comment, although McAdoo is trailing far behind Sheridan Downey, the old age pension enthusiast.

Smith Victor by 27,000 Votes.

COLUMBIA, S. C.—(AP)—Sen. E. D. (Cotton Ed) Smith, who President Roosevelt said "thinks in terms of the past," was renominated today on the basis of returns from 90 per cent of the state's 1,509 precincts.

With 1,348 precincts reported, the senator, marked for the New Deal's purge because of his opposition to several administration measures, had 150,234 votes against 123,195 for Gov. Olin D. Johnston, endorsed by Mr. Roosevelt.

And early today, as the 74-year-old Democratic dean of the Hopkins Defends President in Speech at Boston.

BOSTON—(AP)—It is the belief of Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins that President Roosevelt's Democratic party "purge" is justified and that the administration will not be gagged by "streamlined Tory" opponents.

Hopkins, addressing a conference of Democratic women from the northwestern states last night, asserted that it was a "poor service to Democracy" to seek to throttle free discussion of public affairs by responsible officials.

"It is xxx clearly an American tradition," he said, "that every administration bears the stamp of a political party, enacting and administering its program as a party responsibility.

"Every administration in this nation's history has taken its case to the people xxx."

C. OF C. READY TO FILE PARK PLAN PETITIONS

Referendum on Proposed Non-Partisan Commission to Be Voted on in November.

Referendum petitions calling upon the Mansfield electorate to decide whether city parks shall be operated under a non-partisan park commission will be filed with the Richland county board of election within the next few days, Paul W. Williams, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, said today. A Chamber of Commerce committee on parks is fostering the movement.

Williams said that the 900 signatures required before the question can be submitted on the November ballot, already have been obtained.

"We have already reached the required number of signatures," Williams said, "but with several days remaining before the petitions must be filed, the committee plans to get additional signatures, perhaps 300 more than election laws require."

Deadline Sept. 8.

The petitions must accompany the request to the county election board before the question can be submitted to the voters. Deadline for filing the petitions is Sept. 8.

If approved at the November election, Mansfield parks would come under the jurisdiction of a three-member, non-partisan board, to be known as a park commission.

Designed chiefly "to take the parks out of politics," the commission would have broad powers in the operation of the parks.

It could authorize expansions, improvements and other programs, but would have authority to spend funds only with the authorization and at the direction of city council, it was pointed out.

Slot Machine Law Suit Goes to Ohio Tribunal.

COLUMBUS—(U P)—William J Kraus, of Cleveland, has carried to the supreme court his test of the legality of the Cleveland slot machine ordinance.

Contending that the machines are gambling devices, Kraus won his case in the common pleas court but his ruling was reversed in the court of appeals.

The ordinance attempts to circumvent the state's anti-gambling laws by a provision which states that the slugs may not be replayed or redeemed.

Kraus seeks to stop the city from spending any money to enforce the ordinance.

Quintuplets Turn Down Offer To Be Attraction at Fair

CALLANDER, Ont.—(INS)—The Dionne quintuplets have been offered a "fabulous sum" to appear at the New York 1939 world's fair and have turned it down, Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe has reported.

Strictly speaking, the offer was made to their board of guardians and rejected by the same group, the quints not yet having reached the age when they will realize that they are five valuable young ladies who can demand and get almost any amount of money for just being themselves.

But the United States should not feel too badly about the turning down of the world's fair offer for the guardians also refused to permit their legal charges to be exhibited at the Canadian national exhibition this year or even predict a year when they will be exhibited.

SPEEDS UP NAVY BUILDING PLANS

Rushes Program Along as War Fears Make All Europe Apprehensive.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — With Europe jittery over a possible new major war growing out of the German-Czech crisis, the United States is speeding plans for furtherance of the nation's huge new naval building program.

Eighteen new warships, including two battleships, probably super-warcraft of 45,000 tons, are expected to be built under next year's expansion program, funds for which will be requested in the 1939-40 budget.

The program calls for 10-year expansion in all categories, including auxiliaries, at an approximate cost of $1,200,000,000.

In addition to the two new battleships, next year's program is expected to include four new cruisers, six destroyers and six submarines.

UNDER ATTACK

A. F. of L. Challenges Contract With Company.

GALION—A challenge to the rights of the CIO affiliates in the Stratbury Manufacturing company here, has been made by the office of the eighth regional labor board, Cleveland.

The claim is that a contract recently entered into with the Amalgamated Clothing Workers a CIO affiliate, by the Stratbury company, was not valid because the Amalgamated did not represent a majority of the employes at the time the contract was signed This statement was issued Tuesday by H A. Bradley, general representative of the American Federation of Labor, who has been located in Galion for some time.

The United Garment Workers an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor, claims a majority membership among the Stratbury employes and has petitioned the labor board to conduct an election in accordance with the federal law, to determine who shall have sole bargaining rights with the company.

Bradley stated that the case is considered of such importance that the A. F. of L has assigned its chief counsel, Joseph Padway of Washington, D C., to handle the legal aspects for the United Garment Workers and that it was not until six or seven months later that "the Dutchman" began to "throw" policy cases his way.

A membership meeting is being held by the A. F. of L. group tonight.

DAVIS TESTIFIES HE PAID HINES

The first meeting was held in the apartment of Martha Delaney, later to become his wife, he said.

He said the meeting was arranged so that Joe "Spasm" Ison, a Harlem policy banker, could secure a loan from Schultz. Ison's bank had been heavily "hit" by a lucky number.

Defense Counsel Lloyd Paul Stryker has intimated he would attempt to show that Carney was a fairly deceptive "double" of Hines and that previous witnesses were victims of a case of mistaken identity when they swore they saw Hines visit Dutch Schultz in Connecticut in the summer of 1935.

Davis testified that Schultz gave him $1,500 to represent Carney on a felonious assault charge.

Davis said Carney was about 5 feet 8½ inches in height.

Tells of Organization.

The witness told how Schultz decided to "organize" the independent Harlem policy bankers in 1932—such "bankers" as "Spasm" Ison who was doing a business of $8,000 a day, Alexander Pompez and others.

Step by step, describing how Schultz "muscled in" on the small bankers to form a $20,000,000-a-year syndicate, Davis corroborated the previous testimony of George Weinberg, another Schultz mobster who "squealed."

Earlier Curry had "put the finger" on Hines in an unheralded appearance as a state's witness, testifying that Hines was powerful enough to "dictate" the nomination of William C. Dodge for the district attorneyship in 1933 and that Hines and other district leaders frequently got him to arrange the transfer of policemen from their assigned posts.

The transfers, he said, "invariably" were made, at a rate of between "25 and 50" a year

Curry also agreed that Hines' recommendation of Dodge for district attorney was made "in line" with the regular Tammany procedure in selecting candidates.

SPARKS SILENT ON DUFFY TALK

Conference Believed to Have Concerned Engineer's Claim on Hot Mix Prices.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS—Harry E. Sparks, discharged state highway department engineer, conferred today with Atty Gen. Herbert S. Duffy, presumably concerning Sparks' assertions that the state paid excessive prices for 'hot mix" road materials.

Neither Duffy nor Sparks would discuss the conference. Duffy said he planned further discussions with Sparks, whose job was abolished in an "economy move" after he testified concerning material prices before a state senate investigating committee.

The attorney general also has requested conferences with six college professors who investigated the department, but said he did not know when they would be held.

Statehouse observers interpreted the conferences as a step by Duffy to determine whether he should continue to defend the highway department in taxpayers' suits to recover money which the state allegedly paid excessively on material contracts

DIES REQUEST TURNED DOWN

Labor Department Refuses to Start Deportation Action Against Labor Leader.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins rejected today demands of Chairman Martin Dies, D., Tex., of the house committee investigating un-American activities that the department of labor at once begin deportation proceedings against Harry Bridges, Pacific coast director of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Citing a U. S circuit court of appeals ruling that membership in the Communist party was not grounds for deportation, Miss Perkins rebuked Dies as a legislator for attempting to usurp administrative functions and duties of the federal government.

Deportation proceedings were instituted against Bridges last spring on charges that he was a communist. But a hearing on them was deferred after the New Orleans circuit court held in the Strecker case that Communist party membership was not sufficient grounds to warrant deporting an Arkansas restaurant proprietor. The Strecker case will be appealed to the supreme court.

Dies demanded in a letter to Miss Perkins yesterday that "deportation proceedings against Harry Bridges should be commenced without further delay."

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Chairman Dies of the house committee on un-American activities said today Secretary Perkins had taken the "astonishing action' of "practically dropping" deportation proceedings against Harry Bridges, west coast CIO leader.

FINDS EUROPE'S CAPITALS FIRM AGAINST A WAR

Writer Says Determined and United Front Put Up by Democracies Did It.

By WEBB MILLER
(By United Press)

LONDON — I telephone Europe's key capitals today and discovered a mounting determination to avoid war by a firmly united Democratic front which many diplomats hope the United States will endorse.

By late afternoon the strain and anxiety of a week of crisis arising from the threat of German force against Czechoslovakia had eased perceptibly.

As my telephone calls went through to United Press bureau manager in Berlin—in Paris—in Rome—in Prague, I was given a rapid-fire impression of the changing diplomatic front in Europe.

This change in tone was ascribed to the stiffened attitude of Great Britain.

British Action Credited.

It became increasingly apparent that the British action in lining up the Democratic front as a warning to the Nazi had served to restrain any warlike plans which may have been in the mind of Fuehrer Adolf Hitler.

Here in London it was learned that diplomats were eager to see whether it would be possible for President Roosevelt in some manner to endorse the British leadership.

The French have now convincingly declared they will fight if Germany invades Czechoslovakia.

They believe Hitler is now convinced that Britain will also fight if Germany invades Czechoslovakia.

They believe Hitler is now convinced that Britain will also fight and that Hitler will not dare take the risk at present.

In Berlin, Frederick Oechsner, United Press bureau manager, said there was a slightly more optimistic note among high Nazi officials, who continue to insist that no war-like solution is desired Nevertheless, they emphasized, they are "preparing for all eventualities."

Rome Hopeful.

Stewart Brown, Rome manager, said that a more hopeful tone was developing late this afternoon and that the official press was minimizing the alarm which had been expressed in Paris and London

Reynolds Packard, at Prague, said the government was pleased with recent developments and believed that to a certain extent Germany had been isolated. The Czech government was described as planning a calm course of action regardless of the rejection of its new peace proposals of the Sudeten extremists.

C. OF C. READY TO FILE PARK PLAN PETITIONS

Referendum on Proposed Non-Partisan Commission to Be Voted on in November.

Referendum petitions calling upon the Mansfield electorate to decide whether city parks shall be operated under a non-partisan park commission will be filed with the Richland county board of election within the next few days, Paul W. Williams, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, said today. A Chamber of Commerce committee on parks is fostering the movement.

Williams said that the 900 signatures required before the question can be submitted on the November ballot, already have been obtained.

"We have already reached the required number of signatures," Williams said, "but with several days remaining before the petitions must be filed, the committee plans to get additional signatures, perhaps 300 more than election laws require."

Deadline Sept. 8.

The petitions must accompany the request to the county election board before the question can be submitted to the voters. Deadline for filing the petitions is Sept. 8.

If approved at the November election, Mansfield parks would come under the jurisdiction of a three-member, non-partisan board, to be known as a park commission.

Designed chiefly "to take the parks out of politics," the commission would have broad powers in the operation of the parks

It could authorize expansions, improvements and other programs, but would have authority to spend funds only with the authorization and at the direction of city council, it was pointed out.

IN HIGH COURT

Slot Machine Law Suit Goes to Ohio Tribunal.

COLUMBUS—(U P)—William J Kraus, of Cleveland, has carried to the supreme court his test of the legality of the Cleveland slot machine ordinance.

Contending that the machines are gambling devices, Kraus won his case in the common pleas court but his ruling was reversed in the court of appeals

The ordinance attempts to circumvent the state's anti-gambling laws by a provision which states that the slugs may not be replayed or redeemed.

Kraus seeks to stop the city from spending any money to enforce the ordinance.

Quintuplets Turn Down Offer To Be Attraction at Fair

CALLANDER, Ont —(INS)—The Dionne quintuplets have been offered a "fabulous sum" to appear at the New York 1939 world's fair and have turned it down, Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe has reported.

Strictly speaking, the offer was made to their board of guardians and rejected by the same group, the quints not yet having reached the age when they will realize that they are five valuable young ladies who can demand and get almost any amount of money for just being themselves.

But the United States should not feel too badly about the turning down of the world's fair offer for the guardians also refused to permit their legal charges to be exhibited at the Canadian national exhibition this year or even predict a year when they will be exhibited

NELSON CHOSEN

Sears-Roebuck Executive to Head Wage-Hour Group.

WASHINGTON —(U.P.)— Donald M. Nelson, Sears-Roebuck vice president, will head the important textile industry committee—first proving ground for the new wage-hour law when it goes into effect Oct. 24—it has been learned reliably.

Wage-Hour Administrator Elmer F. Andrews would not confirm Nelson's selection to head the important textile committee, but he did admit that he had asked a mail order company official to come to Washington Friday to discuss textile problems with labor and management representatives.

The textile industry employs more than 600,000 persons normally and will be one of the wage-hour administration's first and most exacting problems because it extends throughout sections of both the north and the south.

SPEEDS UP NAVY BUILDING PLANS

Rushes Program Along as War Fears Make All Europe Apprehensive.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — With Europe jittery over a possible new major war growing out of the German-Czech crisis, the United States is speeding plans for furtherance of the nation's huge new naval building program.

Eighteen new warships, including two battleships, probably super-warcraft of 45,000 tons, are expected to be built under next year's expansion program, funds for which will be requested in the 1939-40 budget.

The program calls for 10-year expansion in all categories, including auxiliaries, at an approximate cost of $1,200,000,000.

In addition to the two new battleships, next year's program is expected to include four new cruisers, six destroyers and six submarines.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 31, 1938.

As school opens we suppose that all the little boys in Milan are told that they have a chance to become just as great as Thomas A. Edison.

One reader of a magazine article on the slums in Washington, D. C., was much disturbed—he didn't know about the slums right here in Mansfield.

Now that the attitude of President Roosevelt toward Senator George is more clearly understood, there has been some inclination to feel that in his quoted remark, "God bless you, Walter," the verb may have been misunderstood in the confusion.

Estimate of Mental Losses.

DEMOCRACY, among its other foes, must number its mental defectives, says Marjorie Van de Water, writing for Science Service. Men and women cannot function as good citizens unless they have sound minds. Yet there are perhaps 1,500,000 people in this country classed as mentally defective and at least as many more whose minds are definitely diseased.

"Mental disease is America's worst health problem,' says the writer. And it is getting worse. "Six of every ten hospital beds are occupied by mental patients. Unknown numbers are being cared for outside of institutions. Yet the facts behind mental disease are as unknown scientifically as are the facts about cancer."

Our most important human heritage, our mentality, she points out, is not inexhaustible, any more than our material resources are. Millions of years have gone to building it up, as in the case of the soil. There may be going on now a wastage of "genes," the carriers of heredity in the living cells, causing a more serious national problem than any of material conservation.

Liquor Business Out of Bounds.

FOR those who sincerely believe that properly regulated liquor business is preferable to a return to prohibition, present conditions in Ohio cannot fail to be distressing.

Timely warning was sounded by Common Pleas Judge Huston yesterday, after pleas of guilty had been entered by proprietors of three taverns charged with selling whisky on Sunday, when he said: "You fellows are going to drive yourselves out of business if you continue to permit employes to violate the liquor laws."

Under the old saloon system, effective until the advent of prohibition, enforcement of regulations had reached a point of compelling reasonably decent conduct of liquor sales places, and issuance of licenses was in the hands of a local board acquainted with the character of men admitted to the business, with restrictions as to the number of saloons on a population basis. Under the old system there also was complete divorcing of entertainment from liquor sales places.

The manner in which licenses of various kinds are issued under the present state monopoly system in vogue in Ohio provides none of the safeguards, either in the matter of character of licensees or in banning evils that were gradually eliminated from old-time saloons.

Instances in which beer places have misused their privilege of keeping open on Sunday and have engaged in the illegal sale of hard liquor have been sufficiently frequent to disclose the weakness of allowing beer licensees to operate on Sundays and this is being remedied by ordinance in a number of Ohio cities.

The manner in which liquor sales places have abused their privileges in rural townships has been such as to arouse so much public resentment by residents of those townships, that, unless speedily corrected, the prediction of Judge Huston that "Prohibition is certain to return if violations continue," seems well founded.

The Dionnes and Their Earnings.

WHAT is reported as a "fabulous sum" for appearance of the Dionne quintuplets at New York's world fair next year, has been rejected by their board of guardians.

This appears to be entirely proper procedure, although millions will doubtless be disappointed in not seeing the quins at the exposition.

These five little girls, by the biological oddity of multiple birth, have already accumulated earnings adequate to provide luxury for their parents, themselves and their brothers and sisters through the lifetime of all of them.

Thus far, at least, the five-year-old quintuplets cannot be accused of being mercenary—as their fortune mounts toward a million dollars—but the motives of their parents, guardians and promoters may well be questioned if the wealth of these particular children is permitted to grow to stupendous figures while other children of at least equal promise are being deprived of even the bare necessities of life and health.

Making all allowance for suitable reward of individual initiative and superior ability, why should there be an inclination on the part of anyone to acquire wealth in excess of the reasonable requirements of self and dependents—except as that surplus wealth can be used for purposes designed to benefit others to whom Nature has been less munificent?

There is possibly no more pitiful spectacle than that of a man who has a peculiar genius for making money, devoting his entire life to building up a fortune—and then dying without having enjoyed any of the pleasures that come to those who devote a part of their surplus to furthering community projects and aiding the less fortunate.

The richness of living has little in common with the richness of accumulated wealth beyond needs. The Dionne quintuplets are fortunate in having a guardianship that places normal living above lucrative exhibitionism.

Whenever a bright child is involved in one of those Hollywood divorces it might be a good idea to award him custody of the parents.

As nearly as can be learned from his recent writings, Alfred M. Landon is just as well satisfied.

What ever became of Mae West's husband? And, for that matter, what's become of Mae?

Prediction: "The end of the shirttail may be in sight"—but not if you're careful.

Watching Trends

(As guest columnist for Preston Grover, Harry C. Hawkins, chief of the division of trade agreements, State Department, reviews America's 18 trade pacts and cites their benefits. Tomorrow, U. S. Senator Bridges will state the case against the pacts.)

By HARRY C. HAWKINS, Chief, Division of Trade Agreements, State Department.

WASHINGTON—The reciprocal trade agreement between the United States and Ecuador, signed on Aug. 6, brought the total number of trade agreements concluded up to the present time to 18.

The United States now has trade agreements with 10 Latin-American countries, seven European nations and Canada. Agreements have been concluded with Cuba, Belgium, Haiti, Sweden, Brazil, Canada, The Netherlands, Switzerland, Honduras, Colombia, Guatemala, France, Nicaragua, Finland, Costa Rica, El Salvador, Czechoslovakia and Ecuador. Negotiations are now under way with the United Kingdom, with Canada for a new agreement, and with Turkey and Venezuela.

In its four years of operation, the trade-agreements program has made a significant contribution toward improved economic conditions within this country as well as toward peace and world recovery.

The Trade Agreements Act provides for negotiations with foreign countries for the reciprocal removal of excessive barriers to an increased exchange of products with them. Such barriers contributed to the decline in United States exports of from $5,250,000,000 in 1929 to a little over $1,500,000,000 in 1932. The trade agreements policy recognizes that in order to be able to sell its products, a nation must stand ready to buy the products of other countries.

Export Trade Up.

THE act authorizes the president, in connection with a trade agreement, to proclaim reductions in United States tariffs by not more than 50 per cent, and to agree to "bind" unchanged the existing treatment accorded to foreign products during the life of the agreement. Under the "most-favored nation" provision of the act, the United States extends the concessions which it grants to the countries with which trade agreements are concluded to all countries which do not discriminate against its trade. The effect of this is to prevent discrimination against United States exports and, by maintaining equality of treatment to practically all countries, to encourage international good will and stimulate a natural flow of world trade generally.

The act was passed in 1934. Since then, our export trade has improved steadily. For the calendar year 1937 total exports from the United States showed a 107.6 per cent increase over our total exports in 1932, and even through the business recession of late 1937 and 1938, exports remained one of the brighter spots in the economic picture.

Imports Down.

OUR imports during recent years have been strongly influenced by special factors. They spurted noticeably as a result of the droughts of 1934 and 1936 and of our increased industrial activity. But more recently they have fallen off because of normal crops and the present lower levels of business activity.

For the fiscal year 1937-1938 our total imports from all trade-agreement countries increased 26.2 per cent over the 1934 and 1935 annual average. This rate is not markedly different from the 28.5 per cent increase in imports from all non-agreement countries for the same periods.

To the United States this means foreign markets, greater domestic purchasing power, as well as advantages for consumers. To this and all other countries it also gives hope of escape from the innumerable devices which, by constituting veritable economic warfare, have been strangling world trade.

If the trade-agreements program can halt the spread of this economic warfare and promote international economic co-operation looking toward economic security and stability, it will have laid the foundations of world peace—for in economic peace and order lie the hopes of political peace and order.

Timely Editorial

Pressure On Relief Workers.

In connection with recent primary results it is interesting to recall the discussion in Congress of Senator Hatch's proposal to prohibit relief officials from using their authority to influence "a convention, primary, or other election, or the results thereof," upon penalty of dismissal.

Senator Barkley of Kentucky fought the proposal as "unfair," and in the debate Senator Chavez said the adoption of the measure would mean the defeat of Senator Barkley.

It is a fair assumption in view of Senator Barkley's renomination that he depended upon relief officials to help bring about this happy outcome.

Of course it is outrageous that political pressure should be put upon men and women on relief. The proposal to stop it was defeated by only three votes in the senate at the recent session. It is to be brought forward again and should be adopted.—Kansas City Times.

The Human Side of the News

—By EDWIN C. HILL

THE baby was just one hour old. Yet it was blind. Its mite of a body was already racked with suffering. It was suffering from double pneumonia and from two large burns caused by the mistake of an exhausted nurse. The doctors looked at the little creature and shook their heads. Its case, they said, was hopeless, beyond anything that medical science could do. The spark of life in that tiny body was barely alive, must go out within hours, probably minutes.

It was sightless a few minutes after it was born, in the City of New York, and afflicted with double pneumonia from the moment it came into the world. A tired nurse had bathed the baby's eyes in a 50 per cent solution of nitrate of silver instead of a one per cent solution less than an hour after the child had been delivered.

The mucous membranes and the cornea of each eye were badly burned and the conjuctiva was destroyed. Both eyes were blackened, and down both cheeks, to the chest, burned furrows ran to the baby's breast. You could have laid a pencil in any one of those furrows.

AS THE doctors stood by and the nurses wrung their hands a Missionary Sister of the Sacred Heart of Jesus timidly requested permission to pin a relic of Mother Cabrini to the infant's clothes.

"Please let me," said the good sister. "Everything else has failed. Perhaps God will help."

The physician gave permission. "The case is hopeless," they told the sister. "Do as you wish."

Gently she pinned the relic to the baby's clothing, bowed her head in prayer and left the room. The physicians and nurses who had looked on respectfully placed gauze strips over the suffering eyes and the burns which marked cheeks and breast. They waited for death.

But death did not visit that hospital ward to claim a victim so small, so helpless, so seemingly doomed. Seventy-two hours after the sacred relic was pinned to the baby's clothing not a trace of the burns remained, and eyesight had come to the child. The double pneumonia had vanished. The child was normal in every way. These are the simple facts as vouched for by the doctors and nurses connected with the case, particularly by Dr. Michael H. Horan, who was in charge. He said:

"The average man does not believe in miracles. I do. I saw one."

THIS is the story of the preservation of Peter Smith, 18 years ago in the City of New York. The miracle—call it what you will—is attested to by Cardinal Mundelein, who was then Archbishop of Brooklyn. Peter Smith is now a promising high school student and a fine athlete. The story comes back to me as I read that a final decree, authorizing the beatification of Frances Xavier Cabrini, an Italian nun, who came to this country and did remarkable work among the poor and suffering, has been read before the Congregation of Rites in the presence of Pope Pius in Rome.

The beatification ceremony has been set, tentatively, for Nov. 13. A decree permitting beatification was approved by the Congregation of Rites on July 19. It decided that two recoveries from what seemed to be fatal illness must be attributed to the intervention of Mother Cabrini and be listed, if that is the word, as authentic miracles. The other case was the recovery of Sister Delfina Grazioli, in Seattle, in 1925.

Mother Cabrini first came to this country in 1894. She founded the Missionary Sisters of the Sacred Heart of Jesus. She died in Chicago in 1917 and was buried in New York. The Roman Catholic church will sanctify her at the approved date following the ceremony of beatification next November, and another saint will be added to the long roll of the men and women credited with good works in the service of God and the church.

No one who has ever witnessed a ceremony of beatification in the great basilica of St. Peter in Rome could fail to be impressed, whatever his or her religious faith, with the tremendous solemnity and atmosphere of faith which hangs over all.

His Holiness on his throne. The vast cathedral barely filled with fifty thousand worshippers. The majestic intonations of the Gregorian chants from the lips of the choir. The gorgeous spectacle of the Cardinals in their crimson robes. The medieval atmosphere of the Pope's Guard, wearing their uniforms of the Sixteenth century. But most of all the rise and fall of that stupendous sacred music as the beatification takes place, like nothing so much as the beating of vast wings.

The Boy Who Was "Scared"

WHEN HE WAS a youngster he was afraid of dragonflies. He had been told—and he believed it—that if you fell asleep in the grass of a summer's afternoon the dragon flies would come along and sew your eyes shut. And who wants his eyes sewed fast by a big bug? Not that small boy!

When he was a little older he was afraid of witches. He thought the old lady who lived in the house on the edge of town was like the witch in Hansel and Gretel and if she caught you she'd pop you into her big oven, fattening you first; and your mother and father would never see you again. Very terrible for you, very sad for them.

When he was half-grown he was afraid of girls. They were mysterious, charming, impertinent creatures. They laughed at you. They made you feel awkward, all legs and elbows, and wise boys had little to do with them. Go swimming or fishing with the other kids but have nothing to do with those girls.

When he was almost grown he was afraid of Death. He had gloomy thoughts about living. Life was rich and luscious and some day he'd die. He was afraid he was a coward but he didn't want anybody to know it. It used to bother him. He'd look at other persons and wonder if they, too, were afraid.

For a while, too, he was afraid of Life. He didn't understand it. It was so immense, so varied, and it carried so many challenges and so many responsibilities. How could one man carry so much on one pair of shoulders?

But he learned at last that a dragon fly is harmless and beautiful, that the old witch was only an impoverished and unhappy old woman, that girls are very nice when you get to know them, and that even Death is not anything to make a man cringe. He got himself into the war and learned that bravery is a very common thing and Death is but a minor character in the drama.

And at last it came to him that Life should be no man's bugaboo. Let a man be busy and curious and let him take on his share of obligations and let him learn for himself that Life can be a splendid grab-bag.

So, in the end, he feared Life no more, but was merely afraid he might let too much of it escape him in his few short years on earth.

Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.—Matt. 11:28.

Is There Too Much Guidance?

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

THESE modern youngsters—Personally I believe they're the finest crop yet and my money's on them every time. But I'm beginning to wonder about the handling we're giving them. We mean to do well. No other nation ever tried so hard to give its yearlings the right start—

But are we, perhaps, trying too hard . . .

IS THERE, MAYBE, TOO MUCH GUIDANCE AND TOO LITTLE "GIT OUT AND GIT UNDER" IN OUR EDUCATIONAL SYSTEM?

Now, get me right. I'm no "little red school house" enthusiast. I do NOT believe that the three R's and a wooden water bucket are sufficient equipment for the budding mind. To the contrary, I'm strong for our modern schools and the splendidly equipped people who staff them. And proud to bustin' of my own kid sister, Mardele Robinson, who is one of them.

BUT I'M STILL WONDERING WHETHER LITTLE WILLIE WILL BE FISH, FLESH, FOWL—OR JUST A PRETTY TABLE DECORATION—WHEN THESE HIGH-POWERED SPECITLISTS GET THROUGH WITH THEM.

Perhaps I should explain that little Willie happens to be my faforite job. I receive several hundred letters daily from him, and his sis. Extremely frank and, sometimes, furious letters. For Willie is on a spot, and knows it. But what can he do about it? Search me! That's why I'm writing this article.

Generally speaking, Willie has just graduated from Hi or College, when he writes to me, and is looking for a job. Well, what's wrong or unusual in that? Wasn't Willie's father also looking for a job at his age? He was. But there's a world of difference in the WAY Dad looked for a job—and the way Willie's looking. When Dad at 17 needed a job, he went after that job. He didn't wait for anyone to bring it to him. Also, Dad wasn't choosey. He didn't insist on a particular job . . . a congenial job . . . a job for which he was suited by temperament or ability. He just took any old job that came along and dived in . . . and proceeded to take the painful consequences until he was smart enough to prevent 'em.

But Willie isn't looking for a job that way. We haven't let him. In fact, we've taught him that such an attitude is an utterly stupid, antiquated, unscientific, wasteful and generally screwball method of seeking employment. You don't take any old job that comes along in 1938. YOU PREPARE YOURSELF FOR THE PROPER JOB, AND AVOID, IF POSSIBLE, TAKING ANY OTHER UNTIL IT ARRIVES—says the modern educator.

Accordingly, from the time he enters kindergarten, Willie gets an annual going-over that would service the Queen Mary. He is tested, charted, analyzed, classified, certified, guarded and guided into the one path suited to his particular nature and shielded from any possible mistake or misfortune. With each year, the process is repeated and amplified until, at last, he emerges, ready to face the world.

BUT IS WILLIE REALLY READY? NOT BY A JUGFULL!

"S'matter of fact, no one could be more cruelly unprepared to face that tough old man-killer—Harsh Reality. During all those plastic years, when he should have been learning to make up his stubborn, foolish young mind and face the unpleasant results, Willie has enjoyed the expensive service of a de luxe Body Guard and Guidance Director. Instead of acquiring a sense of his relative unimportance, he has been made to feel that he's Exhibit A. Moreover, he has been led to believe that Life will continue to be the same careful, dignified, selective process with everything nicely classified for his convenience, which he has known in school.

So forth he steps and waits . . . and waits . . . A-N-D W-A-I-T-S . . . for the One Right Job for which he is perfectly fitted but which, somehow, never appears! Small wonder he becomes embittered, bewildered . . . convinced that he has been Done Dirt by Society-at-Large!

A Farmer's Diary

Sky Lines at Night.

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

I WAS wakened in the night, by the collie's fitful barking. Moonlight streamed through my window. The curtains billowed in the fragrant breeze. I got up and went to the door.

Along the distant edge of the night sky was spread a ruddy glow. A fire! It was too far away for accurate speculation, but by the size of the light it might be a barn...a large one.

In fancy I could imagine the noise and commotion of the scene...the heat, the shouts, the running hither and yon... spurting flames eating through vast mows of hay, great clouds of smothering smoke...drama, loss, tragedy.

I went and stood on the porch. Here all was peace. The moonlit field of whitened buckwheat bloom lay like a sheet of silver. Above the dark outline of western trees, a moving finger of light from a distant airport beacon described its farflung half circle on the sky, and disappeared, to return again in another minute, repeating tirelessly its signal of safety and of warning to night travelers of the air.

A distant train went pounding, pounding along...huge rumbling locomotive, long winding ribbon of cars...wheels, wheels of dashing energy and dynamic power...fetching and carrying the farmer's friends and fuel, his tools and coal, his letters and his grain.

From the east I heard a distant rooster's sleepy crow, the chirp of a waking bird. The first faint light of morning was in the sky...creeping slowly up above my neighbor's neat white farmhouse.

I drew a deep breath of the dewy air, laden with fragrance of cornfields and buckwheat bloom, looked back to the spot where the glow of the fire was dying against the horizon, and hoped the man whose barn had burned was well insured.

Then I went back to bed again.

Man About Manhattan

Looks Over New Orleans

—By GEORGE TUCKER

ABOVE THE CLOUDS—Reflections on spasm bands, voodo drug-stores, wrought lace iron work balconies and a thousand other facets peculiar to fabulous New Orleans.

Chicago and Southern's racy lockheed is 7,000 feet above the delta . . . We're clipping along at 181 miles per hour . . . But I can't hear the motors . . . The only thing I hear is the throbbing jangle of a New Orleans spasm band . . . Ever hear one? A spasm band is a miscellaneous collection of Negroes playing on pan tops, soap boxes, broomsticks, tin cans, and gongs . . . They play in jitterbug fashion, wandering the streets like strolling minstrels and serenading everybody for a dime.

Ever hear of anger powder? . . . That's one of the gaudy little items obtainable in voodoo drug-stores . . . You have to be known to get in one of them . . . Then you are treated to this wierd assortment of conjure stuff: dragon's blood, mad luck water, delight powder, black cat oil, hell's devil powder, and snake root. There are scores of other items I could name but they're unprintable in a family newspaper. Cost you from two bits to a dollar fo'bits each.

AS WE spiralled above Shushan airport and lit out across Lake Pontchartrain our position was 29 degrees 56 minutes North Latitude; 90 degrees 84 minutes West Longitude . . . That's where New Orleans is . . . But from where we are there isn't any New Orleans now . . . She's just a bend in the river.

Marguerite Clark's lovely home on St. Charles avenue has been sold to Robert Eddy, the furniture man, and she's in New York . . . And not far above her home is Loyola university. It's so close to Tulane that you can sit in a Loyola classroom and wink at a Tulane co-ed . . . Remember Wilma Frances Saurassen, the actress ("Stage Door")? She's a New Orleans girl and her father is a ship captain.

Sorry I didn't get to tell Dick Vecino, at the St. Charles, and Sam Guarino, at the Roosevelt, goodby . . . They're two bartenders who can tell a good story . . . And I'm sorry I didn't get to visit any of these famous Negro Cults. In summer the refreshment is "blessed lemonade" but in winter it's "blessed coffee."

IF YOU close your eyes and listen carefully you can hear the chant of the snowball man . . . The snowball has edged into the ice cream sales in New Orleans . . . They're gobs of shaved ice saturated with fruit syrup—raspberry, fig, peach, banana, anything you want—5 cents.

Then there is the matter of the "poor boy." A "poor boy" is a sandwich—but what a sandwich! It's a whole loaf of bread halved lengthwise and piled with roast beef, lettuce and tomatoes. Costs a nickel.

You can't see much of the French Quarter unless you walk. . . . And you can't see much of the rest of New Orleans unless you ride. . . . That section of the Quarter near the French Market has been monopolized by Italians. . . . And that area populated by the Irish is known as The Irish Channel. . . . The first white man to glimpse the site of New Orleans was Luis Moscoso, a surveyor with DeSota, but I claim to be the last to have seen it because I trained a pair of binoculars on her just as she disappeared in the haze. That was just a little while ago. . . . Now we're already past Jackson, Miss., and heading into Memphis. . . . The old Big Muddy is crawling beneath us like a big snake, headin' south. . . . In six hours I'll be back in New York.

ENVOY FLYING TO BERLIN WITH BRITISH WARNING

Henderson Expected to Inform Hitler Personally of British Attitude.

that the British government was convinced:

First, that France can not easily evade her obligations to aid Czechoslovakia against aggression;

Second, that if France is involved in war with Germany, Britain can not afford to let her be beaten

"The feeling appears to be growing in London," said an authorized spokesman, "that if any party concerned in the issues at stake should show themselves lacking in a real desire to contribute toward a settlement they must obviously, in view of the issues, be guilty of criminal folly."

Others to Get Warning.

Although this warning was not known to have been sent directly to either President Benes of Czechoslovakia, Reichfuehrer Hitler or Konrad Henlein, the Sudeten German chieftain, the fact that it was made public as the view of the London government was believed to ensure it would reach all three.

Assurance that the French government shared this view was understood to have been given to Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax by Charles Corbin, the French ambassador, when the latter called at the foreign office this morning.

Joseph P. Kennedy, U. S. ambassador, also conferred with Halifax to supplement the information on the central European crisis he obtained yesterday in a talk with Chamberlain and Ambassador Henderson.

Another caller on Halifax was Jan Masaryk, Czechoslovakia's minister.

Sudeten Split Perils Autonomy Discussion.

PRAHA—(AP)—A growing split in the Sudeten German party complicated today the solution of the long-standing dispute between Czechs and Sudetens over minority rights

The radical element of the Nazi-supported Sudeten party, led by Deputy Karl Frank, wanted to reject a government compromise suggestion to meet the Sudeten demands for territorial autonomy

A more conservative group — which fears the menace of a European war and which that much of a war would be fought on Sudeten territory—is urging that the government's plan to divide the Czechoslovak republic into self-governing cantons be accepted as a basis for negotiations. This group is headed by Deputy Ernst Kundt

Between those Sudeten subchieftains was the supreme "fuehrer," Konrad Henlein.

He had not spoken the dicisive word.

The British mission seeking to mediate the dispute was told Henlein needed more time to discuss the situation with his "political friends"

The Czechs insisted that such "political friends" are to be found in Germany

Berlin Continues to Mobilize Armed Forces.

BERLIN —(AP)— The German government continued to mobilize the nation's armed forces at top speed as it awaited today an expected message from Prime Minister Chamberlain on Britain's attitude toward the dangerous situation created by demands for autonomy of Sudeten Germans in Czechoslovakia

Meanwhile the German press, in large headlines and with detail, is concentrating on every tavern brawl in Czechoslovakia, charging Czechoslovaks with violence and terrorism

The campaign coincided with an approach to military preparedness not equalled since the World war.

The army was in sectional maneuvers and it was estimated that by mid-September there would be between 500,000 and 1,000 000 men under arms Conscripts undergoing their first two-year training period which would end Sept. 30 were notified they must remain with the colors at least during October

Chancellor Hitler since Saturday has been inspecting fortifications along the French and Swiss frontiers, his movements carefully guarded.

Downey Leads McAdoo By 22,000 Votes.

SAN FRANCISCO—(AP)—Sheridan Downey, who made a novel old age pension proposal the chief issue of his primary campaign, rolled up a substantial lead today over Sen. William Gibbs McAdoo, President Roosevelt's choice for renomination on the Democratic ticket.

Downey, a San Francisco lawyer, advocated the "$30 every Thursday" pension plan for all jobless over 50 years of age. Californians expect to vote on the proposal in November.

Returns from 6,591 of the state's 12,438 precincts gave Downey 173,036 votes to 141,649 for McAdoo who was commended and supported by President Roosevelt.

In the race for Democratic nomination for governor, the great bulk of votes went to Liberal State Sen. Culbert L. Olson, who expressed mild sympathy for the plan, and to Congressman John F. Dockweiler, most vigorous supporter of the pension. With nearly double the Dockweiler vote, Olson claimed renomination.

In 5,623 precincts Gov. Frank F. Merriam had 123,890 for the Republican nomination to 51,804 for Lieut. Gov. George J Hatfield.

Phil Bancroft had 82,734 votes for the Reublican nomination from 6,055 precincts against 68,721 for Ray L. Riley, state railroad commissioner.

Court Fight Over, Shelby Goes Ahead With Fair Plans

Plans went forward today for Shelby's annual street fair, due to open Sept 7, a week from today, after Common Pleas Judge C H Houston yesterday refused to grant an injunction to prohibit the use of the city's Main street for the fair displays and concessions.

Mayor D Bruce Young of Shelby said he "understood the fair would be held as usual," although Judge Huston's ruling holds the city responsible for damages if Ernest Brunk, who filed the injunction suit, proves that closing of Main street causes him to lose business.

In his action, Brunk, Shelby radio store and filling station proprietor, sought to keep Main street open, contending that he lost business last year during the fair. He said today he was 'undecided" about bringing an action against the city for damages

Mayor Young said the city council "might discuss the affair" at a special meeting tonight which was called for another purpose.

Ralph Bly, president of the Shelby Better Business club, which sponsors the fair, pointed out that "the fair board had an understanding that it would go ahead unless an injunction was granted."

At a special meeting of the concessions committee of the fair board yesterday afternoon, arrangements were made for a program of free acts during the fair next week.

SHELBY—Bids for a new chassis for Shelby's oldest fire engine were still being considered today by city officials, according to Fire Chief Eugene Schull. Seven bids ranging from $1 894 to about $7,000. Chief Schull said, were filed earlier this week at the city hall.

SHIP GOLD HERE

Foreign Nations, Fearing War, Fatten U. S. Reserves.

WASHINGTON —(U.P.)— Treasury officials said today that war fear in Europe is causing foreign gold to be shipped to the United States at the rate of $25,000,000 a week. Although they expected the amount of incoming gold to increase as a result of the European crisis, they were not unusually concerned

In the month ended Aug 27, the treasury purchased approximately $100,000,000 of gold shipped here by foreigners, mostly Europeans. Japan also has been a major shipper, converting its exported gold into goods needed for war supplies.

On Aug. 27, the treasury's gold reserves reached a record high of $13,092,000,000, approximately 55 per cent of the world's total monetary gold stocks.

The current rate of gold arrivals from Europe still is far below the peak of the spring of 1937 when $60,000,000 weekly poured into the United States.

DELINQUENT TAX BILL REDUCED $21,000 IN YEAR

Kolb Reports County's Making Headway in Campaign on Unpaid Assessments.

Richland county is gaining headway in its campaign to collect delinquent real estate taxes, figures at County Treasurer John E Kolb's office showed today.

The county will begin a new tax year with at least $21,000 less outstanding in unpaid taxes than a year ago Delinquencies at the beginning of this year were $364 136, which included $224 354 in real estate tax and $139,782 in special assessment levies.

$342,000 Still Outstanding

On the basis of the $538,000 which has been collected in the last half period, the county will carry $342,686 over to next year's books as delinquent.

The net difference of about $21,000 may be boosted by several thousand dollars when collections are all in this half, the treasurer said

While tax books closed nearly two weeks ago, payments continue to come in, and the last half receipts probably will climb considerably higher than the $538,000 now listed on the books, Kolb said. He had predicted that receipts for the half year period would reach $570,000.

CLARA HATTERY WEDS IN BRILLIANT SETTING

Becomes Bride of Thomas Siegenthaler at Ceremony In Beautifully-Decorated Home: 145 Guests See Ceremony, Attend Reception.

ONE of the most brilliant wedding parties on the Mansfield social calendar in a number of years was that last night at the home of Dr. and Mrs John S. Hattery, 125 Marion avenue, when their daughter, Miss Clara Cornell Hattery, became the bride of Thomas Arthur Siegenthaler, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Siegenthaler, 28 Carpenter road.

The ceremony took place at 6:30 o'clock, with the Rev. David N. Roller, pastor of First Presbyterian church, reading the double ring service in the presence of 145 guests

The rooms throughout the house were decorated with flowers, with a green and white color scheme carried out. The bay window in the living room, banked with Southern smilax, white galdioli and white asters, provided the background for the wedding ceremony.

Before the bridal party entered, Mrs. Albert Twitchell, at the piano, gave three numbers "Bird Song At Eventide," Grieg's "Ich Liebe Dich," and "Oh, Promise Me," before the strains of the Lonengrin bridal chorus filled the rooms.

Miss Hattery came to the improvised altar on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage. Her gown was a lovely one of white lace over ivory satin. A short tulle veil was held to her head with orange blossoms, and her cascade shower bouquet was of gardenias, lilies of the valley and stephanatis.

Her only attendant was her cousin, Miss Barbara Hartman, who wore a gown of shell pink chiffon, and carried a bouquet of rare tubrous begonias in various shades of pink.

Charles Siegenthaler served as his brother's best man, and ushers were Robert Spreng and John Hattery

For her daughter's wedding Mrs Hattery wore a gown of blue chiffon and a corsage of Talisman roses, while Mrs. Siegenthaler also wore blue, in a lace pattern, and her flowers were gardenias

A reception and dinner for all of the guests was held at the home. Eighteen were seated at the bridal table which was beautifully arranged with gardenias, smilax and crystal candelabra. A huge white wedding cake centered the table, with centerpieces of gardenias at either end, and trails of smilax, studded with gardenias, over the cover.

Later in the evening the couple left for New York City and a two-weeks honeymoon in Bermuda. Upon their return they will reside in a new apartment house on West Third street

The bride is a popular member of the younger set in Mansfield After graduating from Senior high she attended Wellesley college and the Katharine Gibbs school at Boston.

Who's to Blame

Could She Be Happy With Philanderer?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX
Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

It seems to me, after several decades' experience in answering letters which come to this column, that the philanderer is born, not made.

He can't help it any more than less favored folk can help a harelip, cross-eyes or a hunchback. This is equally true of philanderers of both sexes, for the come-hither glance is not confined to either sex. The following letter shows what I mean:

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I'm an army girl and live at an army post. I graduated from a state university last June, came home, and fell in love with a man of whom my mother and father disapprove. He's been married and divorced. He's handsome, witty, fascinating, and has had a number of affairs.

But I don't think these affairs are his fault. The women, married and single, just won't let him alone. Without being positively rude, he can't turn down their invitations and the way they date him afterwards. My mother and father don't see things as I do, and tell me if I marry this man I'll be home with them in less than a year's time, but I disagree.

A married man isn't the free-for-all that a single man is, and I am not an unattractive girl. I believe I can hold him. And he has confided to me that when he settles down this time, it means settling down for good, with him, that he's bored to death with being pursued by silly flirtatious women.

I've always been impressed with your good, hard common sense, and the fact that you've never been a sob-sister. As an impartial and disinterested person, what do you think of the chances of happiness of a girl with a man such as I have described?

ARMY GIRL.

Old King Solomon, who seems to have been the super-philanderer of all times, cried out: "Comfort me with apples for I'm sick of love." But I don't doubt for a moment, after he had finished his apple feast, that he went back to his philandering.

In the last analysis, my dear, it's up to you to make this momentous decision. Married to such a man as you describe, you will probably spend your life on the heights of ecstacy and in the depths of despair. But as a friend of mine, who has achieved considerable success in her own profession, and who has a husband identical with the one you describe, said to me: "I prefer the marital roller-coaster, rather than plodding along the cinder path with a dull dub."

Which do you prefer? Your decision should be made knowing what you're in for. Any woman who marries a skirt-chaser, takes the road to the altar at her own risk. Every flutter of an eye-lid is the signal for him to follow, and he can no more help the pursuit than the will-o'-the-wisp which has misled travelers from the beginning of time.

Divorce court testimony shows philandering husbands who love their wives devotedly, love and respect them more than any other woman, but they never can resist the temptation to have one more romantic adventure. And how these poor unstable creatures have paid the piper!

Here's hoping that your decision will be made not without deep consideration.

Melon Salad Cooling For Main Dish

(The Home Kitchen)
By ALICE LYNN BARRY

Melons are finer than ever this year, so enjoy the season while you may, and sample these ways to "cut the melon" (shades of boom days) for prosperous eating!

Melon mold that looks like one, calls for a cup of evaporated milk, one and one-half tablespoons gelatin, three tablespoons cold water, one-half cup strong coffee, one-third cup boiling water, three egg yolks, well beaten; one-eighth teaspoon salt, teaspoon vanilla and one cup sugar. Scald milk; chill thoroughly. Soften gelatin in cold water. Combine sugar and boiling water. Boil until syrup spins a thread. Pour over egg yolks slowly, beating constantly. Add salt. Dissolve gelatin in hot, freshly-brewed coffee. Add to egg mixture; chill. Add flavoring and fold in stiffly-whipped evaporated milk. Turn in melon-shaped mold. Chill until firm. Unmold.

"Half Shell" Salad.

Salad on the "half shell" is a favorite dish with us. We use two cantaloupes, two fresh peaches, one cup watermelon (cubed), one-half cup red cherries (pitted) and one can grapefruit sections. Cut cantaloupe in half, remove seeds. Peel and cut peaches in wedges and combine with cubed watermelon and grapefruit sections. Marinate with French fruit dressing and place in cantaloupe halves. Garnish with cherries. Surround melon on plate with fresh mint leaves. For the dressing, you will need two tablespoons grapefruit juice (drained from sections), one-half teaspoon salt, liquid honey (to sweeten), one tablespoon lemon juice, one-half cup oil and one-quarter teaspoon paprika. Combine ingredients and stir vigorously with fork. Beat well before serving.

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, August 31.

JUDGING BY the prevailing lunar aspects, this may prove to be a day of upsetting, disturbing, sudden events, with gain in any direction problematical. There are signs of sudden loss, with probably bold, boastful strangers offering queer propositions which may be devastating in lure and in final denouement. Travel, adventure, generally erratic and menacing conditions call for sturdy behavior and circumspection lest perils of every nature menace.

If This Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may encounter a year of sudden upsets and distresses, with radical change or upheavals of a thoroughly disruptive and disorganizing nature. These may be superinduced by wily and treacherous strangers whose lures and prodigious proposals may be almost overwhelming in their audacity. Such persons and propositions should be summarily dismissed before calamity and financial peril ensue.

A child born on this day may be bold, audacious and full of initiative. Its foolhardiness may culminate in disaster, although it may be exceedingly clever, original, fond of adventure, research and rash experimentation, possibly in connection with the development of nature's finer forces.

Paint screens and porch furniture before putting away for the winter. They will then be well dried and ready for use when spring comes.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

"Now that's a nice sappy question to ask me!" Lillian exploded when I had asked her if she had seen my father at the time he gave her the message concerning the bringing of the royal fugitives to the farm. "Do you suppose if I had seen your father I would have waited this long to tell you about it? I would have been charged with a dozen loving messages for you, and I would have hauled you aside within five minutes after our arrival to give them to you. I wouldn't have cared how many gunmen you were holding at bay on the attic stairs, or how many queens were flopping into swoons in the kitchen. You would have had your messages.

"Forgive me," I pleaded, when I had stopped laughing at her nonsense. "I knew, of course, that you couldn't have seen him, but—"

"Okay," she interrupted with a grin. "Now that we've settled that question, I'll go on with this saga. We're likely to be interrupted at any minute, you know, and I'm anxious to get it off my chest."

Code Message Comes.

"We were up at Northhampton, settling the girls into the beginning of their college life," she said, "when the messenger came to us bearing a message in a code that in the old days only your father and I knew. It was one he had made up for me, I suppose, because he knew what I dub I am about codes.

"But this one is foolproof," she said, "because it doesn't follow any known rules, and because its messages are so apparently plausible. This one, for instance, purported to be a note from an old friend, Thomas Walker, saying that he was delighted Marion was entering college in a city so near his own town and begging permission to visit her and invite her to his home. He asked for a reply to be sent by the messenger, who was so much the honest country yokel that I could not tell whether he was one of your father's trusted men, acting a role magnificently, or if he had made use of a man who had no idea of what was going on."

She stopped for breath, while I fairly held my own in tribute to the thrilling recital of her story.

"The name 'Thomas Walker' was my signal. It was one of a dozen which he used to use, changing as often as possible, and you can imagine the thrilled excitement with which Harry and I shelved the girls—they were perfectly willing to be shelved, being seized with a Rikki-tikki-tavi complex for 'running and finding out'—shut ourselves up in our room and tackled the message, telling the man to return in a half hour for his answer.

Were In Danger.

"The message was short and imperative," she went on. "We were to go directly to the hospital where Olga was, tell her that your father said that she and Olina were in deadly danger of death or kidnaping again from the same sources which had threatened them before, and that they were to leave with us as soon as we could throw Philip Veritzen off the track. Your father expressly stipulated that under no circumstances was Philip Veritzen to guess where they were going, or even that they were contemplating leaving the hospital."

"What a task!" I breathed as she paused.

"Yes," she admitted, smiling ruefully, "it was some job, especially as your father left all the details to us. He said that he had become cognizant of a plan to snatch the royal women from the hospital tomorrow night, and he was sure that the conspirators had only a single watcher for the hospital. He said he had stationed two guards over the hospital to watch out for this fellow, and that in all probability we would not be molested in our getaway, when we would be accompanied by two of his other men.

'You can imagine the hectic time that followed," she said. "Of course, I sent back the apparently formal acknowledgement of his courteous invitation, which contained the one word, 'Yes,' the only one your father wished, and then we started preparing for the fooling of Philip Veritzen, a job for which I had no yen at all. It simply isn't done—not more than twice or so in a lifetime."

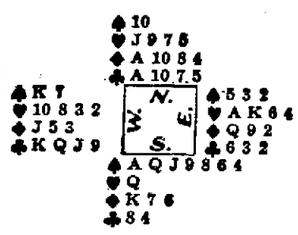
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay
"The Authority on Authorities"

TAKING A PEEK

IF THE defender at your left opened a king and thereafter showed up with the jack, you know he has the queen. If he later leads small in another suit, his partner winning with the king, you can bet that ace is at your right. It is almost as clear as taking a peek at their hands. You can by such process obtain information upon which to base squeezes or end-plays of the highest refinement.



(Dealer: East. East-West vulnerable.)

At his contract of 4-spades South allowed himself to miss his contract by not availing himself of the information given him by the opponents.

He won the lead of the club K with the A and lost the spade finesse to West's K. The club J was cashed by West and followed by the heart 2 to the K of East, who returned the club 6. After ruffing this trick, South cashed two spades and then tried to finesse the diamond 10, which lost to East's Q.

At the eighth trick South should have resorted to a squeeze instead of trying what was no finesse at all. If each opponent held three diamonds and West was protecting the club suit, as his lead would indicate, and East was holding the top heart, the squeeze was the winning play.

At the eighth trick declarer should have led a trump and followed with the remaining two. He would then hold three diamonds in his own hand and in dummy the heart J, diamonds A-10 and club 10. West would have three diamonds and club J and East three diamonds and the heart A. At trick 10 he had a double squeeze on the opponents.

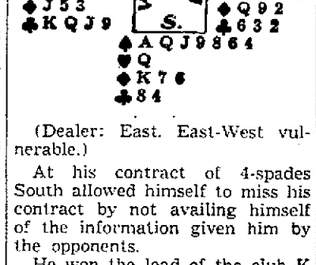
Tomorrow's Problem



(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

What is the best defense against North's contract of 5-Clubs?

Fresia and oxalis bulbs are brought into flower much more slowly than most of the other bulbs used for winter decoration. If they are wanted for Christmas blooming they should be started now. It is not neecssary to place the potted bulbs in a dark cool place, as is the case with daffodils and tulips, but they should be kept out of the sun until well started. This is also the time to start the calla lily into growth by repotting it in rich loam, but without increasing the size of the pot. The low growing Godfrey calla is better than the tall old-fashioned kind for general use.

THEATER

Laurel and Hardy

What will probably be the last of the Laurel and Hardy comedies, at least for some time, is to be one of the funniest they have made. In the future the rotund Hardy will work with Harry Landon, "baby face" comedian who was a favorite several years ago. The Hal Roach studio has canceled the Stan Laurel contract, thus breaking up the famous team. Their last picture, "Blockheads" comes to the Madison Thursday for the remainder of the week. The action takes place in a dignified and rather austere apartment house, which provides a perfect background for the nutty gags of the two comedians. Patricia Ellis, Minna Gombell, Billy Gilbert and James Finleyson are the supporting players.

Robinson Breaks Rackets

Racket busting Edward G. Robinson, whose detective stories were a popular radio serial, is offered in "I Am The Law" at the Ohio for the last half of the week, starting Thursday. In this story Robinson is the fighting district attorney, who goes out to clean up a city that is held in the grip of wholesale slaying, widespread racket terror and gangdom in general. Interest is added to the character Robinson portrays by the fact that he was a mild-mannered professor before he was dragged into cleaning up the city. But when he starts he makes a grand cleaning, using his fists as well as his head. The climax is brought about by a motion picture which establishes the motive—and is a perfectly feasible ending. Barbara O'Neil, Wendy Barrie, John Beal and Otto Kruger are in the cast.

Mr. Moto Continues

Although J. P. Marquard created the original character of Mr. Moto in his Saturday Evening Post stories, the pictures that are now being made around the character are not written by Marquard but by studio writers who merely use the famous character. The same thing was true of the Charlie Chan stories and of many of the Peter B. Kyne and Oliver Curwood pictures. Mr. Moto, as played by Peter Lorre, is one of the popular serial characters of present day pictures. In his latest adventure he faces unknown perils in a strange and mysterious wilderness that is peopled with all sorts of unseen terrors. "Mr. Moto Takes A Chance" is one of the two features at the Majestic, the other being Fredric March and Carol Lombard in "Nothing Sacred."

Miss Desti Appears

Another on of the much-touted foreign importations who has seemed to fizzle out before she ever became known to the American screen audiences is Luli Desti who has made but two American films, the last of which was "She Married An Artist". Miss Desti plays opposite John Boles and they romp through a mad sort of marriage in which they hope to get even with each other. Both are artists, one an American and the other a French painter, and the American's penchant for pretty faces makes for anything but a happy marriage. The picture is at the Ritz, along with "Dead End" starring Sylvia Sidney and Joel McCrea.

JELLY-MAKERS HAVE WEEK TO ENTER CONTEST

Deadline for Entries Set for Sept. 8; Any Resident of County Eligible.

How are you getting along with your entries for The News-Journal jelly-making contest?

There's only about a week left to get those sparkling jellies in glasses and enter them in the contest at the Ohio Public Service building, South Park street. The deadline is 6 p. m. Thursday, Sept. 8.

Entries will be judged Sept. 8 and 9 by a member of the Woman's Auxiliary to the American Legion, a dietician of Westinghouse and a dietician of the Ohio Public Service company.

This is the top season for jelly making, with a wide variety of fruit available. A colorful, tasty glass of jelly—whether it's apple, peach, plum, grape or some other flavor—may win one of the useful prizes in the contest.

Texture Counts 40 Per Cent.

The jelly will be judged on the basis of 40 per cent for texture, 35 per cent for fresh fruit flavor, 10 per cent each for color and clearness, and 5 per cent for the container.

The jelly must be in a container which will permit removal of the contents without damage. And no entries will be returned. They will be used by the American Legion auxiliary for distribution to needy families.

To be eligible for a prize, the jelly must be made with Certo or Sure-Jell, and each glass must be accompanied by a Certo bottle cap or a Sure-Jell label. Only one fruit can be used in a glass—no mixing of fruits will be permitted.

Any resident of Richland county is eligible to enter, and each entry must bear the name and address of the entrant and show the contents of the glass.

First prize in the contest is a Westinghouse Electric roaster while other prizes will include copper griddles, silver servers and canning equipment.

CHAPTER 30

THE NEXT morning, as usual, it was Laurie who awakened first. A few minutes later, Noel yawned and sat up in bed. So Laurie fixed some coffee and toast.

She brought it to Noel in bed and sat down beside her. "Listen, Noel," she began, "even if Doctor Paige does go around a lot with Ruth Chester, I can't help having a feeling that he loves you."

"Yes?" Noel lifted her pretty golden brows. "Well, in that case, don't you think he has a queer way of showing it?" There was bitterness in her voice.

"Men are funny," Laurie said, getting up and going over to the dresser to get a jar of cold cream. "But I believe it just the same," she finished.

"How can you be such a Pollyanna when things are so wrong between you and Jimmy?" Noel asked thoughtfully.

"I suppose it's because I'm hoping somebody can be happy even if we can't."

They fell into a silence then, Noel wondering about Jimmy and Laurie. They had not been seeing each other lately, she knew. But Noel didn't ask anything about that. She dreaded seeing the look of pain which would come into Laurie's face Instead, Noel told her about Chris and his offer.

Laurie was delighted. She was the warm-hearted type of girl who really could find happiness in the good fortune of her friends.

"I think that's perfectly wonderful," she exclaimed.

Noel smiled at Laurie's enthusiasm. "I feel af is a great burden has been lifted off my shoulders—to be free of the Peacock and of Nick."

"I know it was hateful for you there," Laurie said understandingly. Then she went back to Julian. "Honestly, Noel, I don't believe he's the least bit in love with Ruth Chester And she knows it. That's why she was so catty to you while I was sick She's jealous because she knows, whether she wants to admit it or not, that Doctor Paige loves you"

"And I'm jealous of her," Noel answered in her forthright way, "because she can see him every day, and share his life, and has a chance to sell herself to him as being the type of woman he should marry, while I—don't have a chance in the world to impress him."

"You don't really need to, honey," Laurie argued tenderly. Then she said that Doctor Paige was kept busy all the time, and that she had heard several people from the Medical Arts building say that he was driving himself too hard.

"Does he look ill?" Noel asked.

"He looks tired," Laurie answered. She was dressed now, had her immaculate gloves in her hands. She never went anywhere without a clean pair.

"Come to the De Luxe for dinner tonight," she sugested "He'll probably be there. He's asked me about you several times, you know. Maybe he's hoping to see you."

"If he is, he's certainly not doing anything about it," Noel said, some of the bitterness creeping again into her voice.

"Don't be like that." Laurie reproached gently. Then she said she was going to expect Noel and left.

The truth was Noel had decided to see Julian at the earliest moment. Now that a number of hours had passed since Nick had made his threat, Noel's fears were not as great She thought it was probably nothing but idle talk on Nick's part caused by his anger at her for leaving the Peacock But she still thought she'd better say something to Julian about what Nick had insinuated

At 11 o'clock Noel went to the studio address Chris had given her She was wearing one of the $1 98 voile dresses she had bought from a bargain basement It had a tiny blue flower against a cream background, with a very wide circular skirt, and she wore a piece of narrow blue velvet around her slim waist. She thought it would do very nicely to dance in since the skirt was so full.

Mr. Breton wasn't there yet, but Chris was, so they had a chance for a talk during which he gave her a number of pointers about dancing, and they practiced some difficult steps together. You'll get along like a house afire," Chris told her admiringly.

Noel flushed with pleasure at his praise.

"A few weeks' practice," Chris went on, "and you'll improve so fast you won't know yourself. I don't mean that it will be easy, but if you're willing to work hard, you'll make the grade."

"I'll work, Chris," Noel promised earnestly. She had an idea that all this strenuous practice Chris was talking about would seem almost like play after those hours she had put in at the Peacock.

Then Carey Breton came in, immaculate in tweeds and beret. He went to a side door and called someone who came at once. It was the pianist, a small, rather dwarfish man with dreamy gray eyes. He took his place at the concert grand at the far end of the studio, and Noel knew the minute his fingers touched the keys that here was a real musician.

She was shown one intricate step after another, which was explained with great patience, and which she was able to follow cleverly enough. Sometimes she went over a particularly difficult step as many as 40 times before Mr. Breton would let her start on another. She was beginning to realize what Chris had meant by hard work.

* * *

It was 2 o'clock before Mr. Breton was ready to stop. Noel felt herself to be a wreck.

She sank weakly into a chair after Carey Breton left and the pianist had closed the piano and silently tiptoed away.

Chris laughed at her. "The first hundred years are the hardest, sweetheart"

He bent over her then and kissed her lightly

Noel sat up "Chris, please—"

"You don't want me to kiss you? All right, sweetheart, whatever you say goes," Christ said with his usual nonchalance. Then he looked back at her and smiled. "But if you should change your mind at any time, you'll let me know won't you?"

"Idiot!" Noel laughed.

Then Chris said, "How about lunch?"

"A grand suggestion I'm famished." Noel hadn't eaten the toast Laurie had brought her for breakfast, and had only tasted the coffee. No wonder she was hungry after all that strenuous exercise. "I'll probably order everything on the menu," she smiled.

"That's okey by me." Chris smiled back. Then he said that Carey was a hard taskmaster, but that he had wanted to be sure Noel could take it. "And you can," he finished.

They went to an uptown place, one of those arty restaurants done in Spanish style. Gay senoritas with high-piled dark hair and jeweled combs, with highly colored embroidery shawls over their short full dresses, were hurying about with trays of food. A dark, good-looking young man in the elaborate dress of a bull fighter strolled in and out among the tables, playing a guitar and singing a Spanish love ballad in a soft, passionate voice.

Chris ordered a lovely meal, things Noel hadn't tasted in a rather long time· broiled squab, iced melon, some mysterious delicacy under a silver cover, avocado salad, and a fragrant iced tea which he said would give her a lift.

While they ate, he talked over their plans "This is really an occasion, you know. The beginning of our mutual success."

* * *

For Chris was feeling confident as to Breton's final decision. "As soon as he definitely makes up his mind," Christ said, "we'll leave at once for the coast."

Noel looked at him in surprise. "The coast?" she repeated.

"Of course," Christ smiled. "Hollywood. That's what it's all about. Carey, you see, has a tie-up with one of the big studios."

Noel somehow had been stupid. She had not realized that Chris had been thinking of Hollywood all this time.

"We're headed for the movies, don't you understand?" Chris exulted.

"Yes, yes, of course," Noel answered, but she felt her heart sink. She wasn't sure she wanted to go to Hollywood. To go away—to leave everything here!

Chris went on talking gaily, making plans, not reading Noel's indecision from her expression.

Noel decided she would talk it all over with Julian tonight at the De Luxe. She would find out how he felt about it. Just why, however, his opinion should matter so much, she couldn't say But she was anxious to have Julian's opinion. If he thought she should go—then that meant but one thing: he wasn't really interested.

But Julian wasn't at the De Luxe when Noel arrived. She sat at a table, waited a while, then ordered a simple meal. But still Julian didn't come.

When Noel finished, she went up to the cash register and paid the check. She could tell by Laurie's eyes that she had seen Julian. So she said, "You don't want to tell me that he went off again with Ruth Chester, do you?"

A man came to pay a check, so it was a minute before Laurie answered. Then she just simply nodded. After which she said, "Don't mind, Noel. After all—I suppose he couldn't get away from her."

"I don't mind," Noel exclaimed in a brittle voice. "Why should I? I'm going to Hollywood."

(To Be Continued.)

INCREASE OF 218 SHOWN IN AREA SCOUT REGISTRATION FOR YEAR

An increase of 218 in registrations of Boy Scouts in the Johnny Appleseed area has been shown during the first eight months of 1938 over the same period in 1937, according to a report for the period completed yesterday at scout headquarters.

The total number of scouts registered in the area to date is 1,030, while registrations for the same period last year were 812. The scout enrollment is one of the highest ever reached in the area, according to Floyd Dent, area scout executive.

Increases also have been made in the number of scouts advanced to various ranks, and in the number of merit badges awarded for the same period, the report shows.

During the first eight months of this year, 308 scouts were advanced to various ranks, and 623 were awarded merit badges. For the same period last year, 247 received rank advancements and 522 received merit badges.

The number of scouts who received advancements this year include eight Eagle ranks, 22 Life, 32 Star, 182 Second Class and 64 First Class.

Special awards made this year include six bronze Eagle palms, three gold eagle palms, one silver palm and one combination gold and silver palm, one gold journalism quill and one boatswain mate's badge for Sea Scouts.

At least six more area and district courts of honor will be held during the remaining four months of the year.

Rotarians Told Of City Manager Plan By Student

Various forms of municipal government, extending through 200 years of changes, were explained at Tuesday's Rotary meeting by John Poll, Mansfield high school graduate who is now completing a course at Northwestern university.

In a discussion of advantages and disadvantages of different plans of city government under political control, Poll told of early steps toward the city manager and charter form of government, under which almost 500 cities in the United States are now operating.

The talk clearly outlined methods of procedure under a city manager plan and also explained the manner in which residents of a city can proceed to make a change over to this form of municipal government.

Charles H. Hughes was chairman of the meeting, which was held at Westbrook Country club. Starting next week, meetings will return to the Mansfield-Leland hotel.

Thomas J. Hanley was welcomed back from a six-week trip through the northwest, including a visit to Alaska.

ASKS $3,000 FOR TRAFFIC INJURIES

Husband Files Suit Against Fruit Firm in Behalf of His Wife.

A suit to collect $3.000 personal damages from the Florida Fruit company, Ironton, O., had been filed in common pleas court today by George Cushing, R. D. 3, Mansfield.

Filed in behalf of his wife, Mrs. Rosemary Cushing, a minor, the action seeks damages for injuries she received last Dec. 18 when a car in which she was riding crashed into a parked truck on Park avenue east.

The petition states that the truck, owned by Johns Parsons, of the defendant company, was parked without lights or flares, Mrs. Cushing suffered disfiguring injuries to her face, a brain concussion, and leg injuries, the plaintiff asserts.

UNDER ATTACK

A. F. of L. Challenges Contract With Company.

GALION—A challenge to the rights of the CIO affiliates in the Stratbury Manufacturing company here, has been made by the office of the eighth regional labor board, Cleveland.

The claim is that a contract recently entered into with the Amalgamated Clothing Workers a CIO affiliate by the Stratbury company, was not valid because the Amalgamated did not represent a majority of the employes at the time the contract was signed. This statement was issued Tuesday by H. A. Bradley, district representative of the American Federation of Labor who has been located in Galion for some time.

The United Garment Workers an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor claims a majority membership among the Stratbury employes and has petitioned the labor board to conduct an election in accordance with the federal law, to determine who shall have sole bargaining rights with the company.

Bradley stated that the case is considered of such importance that the A. F. of L has assigned its chief counsel Joseph Padway of Washington, D. C., to handle the legal aspects for the United Garment Workers.

A membership meeting is being held by the A. F. of L group tonight.

DAVIS TESTIFIES HE PAID HINES

'Mouthpiece' for Schultz on Stand Today, Tells of Visit in 1932.

and that it was not until six or seven months later that "the Dutchman" began to "throw" policy cases his way.

The first meeting was held in the apartment of Martha Delaney, later to become his wife, he said.

He said the meeting was arranged so that Joe "Spasm" Ison, a Harlem policy banker, could secure a loan from Schultz. Ison's bank had been heavily "hit" by a lucky number.

Defense Counsel Lloyd Paul Stryker has intimated he would attempt to show that Carney was a fairly deceptive "double" of Hines and that previous witnesses were victims of a case of mistaken identity when they swore they saw Hines visit Dutch Schultz in Connecticut in the summer of 1935.

Davis testified that Schultz gave him $1,500 to represent Carney on a felonious assault charge.

Davis said Carney was about 5 feet 8¼ inches in height.

Tells of Organization.

The witness told how Schultz decided to "organize" the independent Harlem policy bankers in 1932—such "bankers" as "Spasm" Ison who was doing a business of $8,000 a day, Alexander Pompez and others.

Step by step, describing how Schultz "muscled in" on the small bankers to form a $20,000,000-a-year syndicate, Davis corroborated the previous testimony of George Weinberg, another Schultz mobster who "squealed."

Earlier Curry had "put the finger" on Hines in an unheralded appearance as a state's witness, testifying that Hines was powerful enough to "dictate" the nomination of William C. Dodge for the district attorneyship in 1933 and that Hines and other district leaders frequently got him to arrange the transfer of policemen from their assigned posts.

The transfers, he said, "invariably" were made, at a rate of between "25 and 50" a year.

Curry also agreed that Hines' recommendation of Dodge for district attorney was made "in line" with the regular Tammany procedure in selecting candidates.

SPARKS SILENT ON DUFFY TALK

Conference Believed to Have Concerned Engineer's Claim on Hot Mix Prices.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS—Harry E. Sparks, discharged state highway department engineer, conferred today with Atty. Gen. Herbert S. Duffy, presumably concerning Sparks' assertions that the state paid excessive prices for 'hot mix" road materials.

Neither Duffy nor Sparks would discuss the conference. Duffy said he planned further discussions with Sparks, whose job was abolished in an "economy move" after he testified concerning material prices before a state senate investigating committee.

The attorney general also has requested conferences with six college professors who investigated the department, but said he did not know when they would be held.

Statehouse observers interpreted the conferences as a step by Duffy to determine whether he should continue to defend the highway department in taxpayers' suits to recover money which the state allegedly paid excessively on material contracts.

DIES REQUEST TURNED DOWN

Labor Department Refuses to Start Deportation Action Against Labor Leader.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins rejected today demands of Chairman Martin Dies, D., Tex., of the house committee investigating un-American activities that the department of labor at once begin deportation proceedings against Harry Bridges, Pacific coast director of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Citing a U. S. circuit court of appeals ruling that membership in the Communist party was not grounds for deportation, Miss Perkins rebuked Dies as a legislator for attempting to usurp administrative functions and duties of the federal government.

Deportation proceedings were instituted against Bridges last spring on charges that he was a communist. But a hearing on them was deferred after the New Orleans circuit court held in the Strecker case that Communist party membership was not sufficient grounds to warrant deporting an Arkansas restaurant proprietor. The Strecker case will be appealed to the supreme court.

Dies demanded in a letter to Miss Perkins yesterday that "deportation proceedings against Harry Bridges should be commenced without further delay."

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Chairman Dies of the house committee on un-American activities said today Secretary Perkins had taken the 'astonishing action" of "practically dropping" deportation proceedings against Harry Bridges, west coast CIO leader.

FINDS EUROPE'S CAPITALS FIRM AGAINST A WAR

By WEBB MILLER
(By United Press)

LONDON—I telephone Europe's key capitals today and discovered a mounting determination to avoid war by a firmly united Democratic front which many diplomats hope the United States will endorse.

By late afternoon the strain and anxiety of a week of crisis arising from the threat of German force against Czechoslovakia had eased perceptibly.

As my telephone calls went through to United Press bureau manager in Berlin—in Paris—in Rome—in Prague, I was given a rapid-fire impression of the changing diplomatic front in Europe.

This change in tone was ascribed to the stiffened attitude of Great Britain.

British Action Credited.

It became increasingly apparent that the British action in lining up the Democratic front as a warning to the Nazi had served to restrain any warlike plans which may have been in the mind of Fuehrer Adolf Hitler.

Here in London it was learned that diplomats were eager to see whether it would be possible for President Roosevelt in some manner to endorse the British leadership.

The French have now convincingly declared they will fight if Germany invades Czechoslovakia.

They believe Hitler is now convinced that Britain will also fight if Germany invades Czechoslovakia.

They believe Hitler is now convinced that Britain will also fight and that Hitler will not dare take the risk at present.

In Berlin, Frederick Oechsner, United Press bureau manager, said there was a slightly more optimistic note among high Nazi officials, who continue to insist that no war-like solution is desired. Nevertheless, they emphasized, they are "preparing for all eventualities."

Rome Hopeful.

Stewart Brown, Rome manager, said that a more hopeful tone was developing late this afternoon and that the official press was minimizing the alarm which had been expressed in Paris and London.

Reynolds Packard, at Prague, said the government was pleased with recent developments and believed that to a certain extent Germany had been isolated. The Czech government was described as planning a calm course of action regardless of the rejection of its new peace proposals of the Sudeten extremists.
